The first day of school is always an exciting time (sometimes a scary time ☹). My first principal told me that I couldn't leave the day before until the first day of school was ready and I waited for the desk for the students. I still remember and follow edafter 10 years of teaching. Doing the right thing when students come in is definitely helpful for both teachers and students to be nervous and anxious. This post will share some of my go-to first day of school activities I've used for morning work over the years (and they're all free!) and the first morning work option for school day is school-themed crossword puzzles and/or word search. These activities are a simple way to help students return to school without heavy study. And most students love word search and crossword puzzles. Copy back and forth to allow students to choose to complete or do both. Choosing Activities Committee It's not a secret that I love using the selection board on my instructions. Using the work selection board on the first day of school is a great way to know what students prefer and what activities they are attracted to. It will give them ownership of the job and give you a good insight into their preferences. You can work on the same selection board throughout the week, continue working, or select a new board every day. A quick student survey student survey is another option for the first day of school activities. Allow students time to answer some simple questions about themselves. You can then use these surveys later in your partner or as a whole group activity to share facts about each other. If the morning work time to be read and responsive printable should be a little longer, I recommend the first day of school activities. Place these two-page print water with a basket of high-interest books and some simple questions about the book. Students will read the selected book for 10-15 minutes and then answer questions. This is another first day of school activities that can last throughout the week, such as choosing a new book for students to read and respond to every day (an empty copy of the printout). If you are teaching only math facts, completing math facts, this first day of school activity is a good option. I actually like to combine this with student surveys and copy them on the back. For this activity, students complete the missing spaces in the math fact table. This is also a great way to see at a glance the multiplication fact knowledge of the students. Want to go back to the school coloring page and have a first day of school morning work that is easy for students to complete? This will return to the school coloring page. Place a crayon or colored pencil to keep students away from their nerves. The bonus idea for this back to school coloring print printing is to have several copies on hand to meet the teacher or open the night of the house where the young err can be painted. We hope you can find some work for you in the first week of school. I have never allocated a seat - a seat assigned a tip for the first day of school. I think it helps the nervous and students who are worried that no one will want to sit next to them or where to sit. Welcome students to the door and help them find a seat if needed. If all the students come to the staggering band at once, they greet them quickly, welcome them outside the hallway, and stumble in the classroom. Have students bring all their belongings to their desks and reserve all their bags. This allows you to call a group and enter items or documents in an open house (and in this way, don't worry about the book bag mess yet). Once all items are in place, demonstrate the book bag procedure, and have the student group properly place the book bag while the rest of the work continues in the morning. The focus of that first day is to bring more to building relationships, classroom and comfort with you, getting to know each other. I sprinkle them on procedures and rules that occur naturally, but I don't send my first day to this. We will do more on the second day and the next day. Want more school activities and resources?
